1. Modern Culture Leads the“Five Principles”to Adapt to the Basic Connotation of the Path of Social Rule of Law

The“Five Principles”refer to:protecting the Legitimate rights, stopping illegality,containing extreme,resisting infiltration,combating crime.Protecting the legitimate rights is the premise,stopping illegality is the focus,containing extreme is the goal,resisting infiltration is the guarantee,and combating crime is the means.Modern culture refers to the sum of the achievements of human civilization with specific historical significance and cultural value.In the current period of social transformation,modern culture plays a more and more important role in people’s life.On the one hand,it can help people correctly understand the society and themselves,promote people to establish a correct outlook on life,values,and world outlook,guide people to form a correct way of thinking,and promote the continuous progress of society;On the other hand,modern culture has strong attraction and penetration,and can spread advanced ideas and concepts.Modern culture can effectively guide the formation and development of social mainstream ideology and mainstream values.At the same time,it can also promote the construction of socialist democracy and promote the harmonious development of society.In today’s society,the leading role of modern culture is becoming more and more obvious.Therefore,modern culture plays a leading role in adapting to the“Five Principles”.

2. Protect the Legitimate Rights

Protect the legitimate rights means that in social governance,we must adhere to the principle that everyone is equal before the law,no one is allowed to enjoy privileges beyond the law,all actions must comply with the provisions of the law,and any illegal and criminal acts must be punished in accordance with the law.Protecting the legitimate rights is the respect and protection of legitimate rights and interests,which reflects the basic requirements of modern Rule of Law.

Modern Rule of Law is the Rule of Law with human rights as its core, and human rights are the core value of modern Rule of Law. To safeguard human rights is to safeguard social fairness, justice and legal dignity. To protect legitimate rights is to implement the will of the state and maintain social order through the formulation of laws and regulations. The will of the state is a universally binding rule and standard formulated and issued by the organizations of state power and repeatedly applied to the whole society, the core of which is to protect the rights of citizens. The compatibility between the principle of protecting legitimate rights and modern culture lies in the following aspects: firstly, there is inherent consistency between protecting legitimate rights and protecting human rights; Secondly, the principle of protecting legitimate rights embodies the fundamental goal of the construction of the Rule of Law; Thirdly, there is an internal consistency between protecting legitimate rights and the spirit of the constitution; Fourthly, there is an internal consistency between protecting legitimate rights and the principles of the Rule of Law; Fifthly, there is an internal consistency between protecting legitimate rights and the principle of equality; Sixthly, there is an inherent consistency between protecting legitimate rights and the human rights principle. In short, under the guidance of modern culture, to adhere to the principle of protecting legitimate rights, we must strictly enforce the law, administer justice impartially, protect the legitimate rights and interests of citizens from infringement in accordance with the law, and maintain social fairness, justice, and legal dignity.

3. Stop Illegality

“Stopping illegality” refers to laws enacted by the state that prohibit or restrict people from engaging in certain activities. In social governance, when people carry out certain activities, if they violate the law, they should be prohibited by law. It is the best understanding and application of the principle of “stopping illegality”. We can see that “stopping illegality” is the same as “prohibition of abuse of power”, “prohibition of corruption of power” and “prohibition of rent-seeking of power” in modern culture.

In modern culture, the understanding of “prohibition of abuse of power” includes not only the supervision and restriction of public authority, but also the protection and relief of citizens’ rights. In modern society, both public authority and individual citizens should exercise their rights according to the requirements of the law, so as to keep the balance and harmony between state power, civil rights and social interests.

4. Contain Extremes

Containing extremes is to effectively control all kinds of extreme ideas in society through various means, measures, and methods, so as to achieve social harmony and stability. The containment of extremes in modern culture and the “containment of illegality” in the “Five Principles” have internal compatibility, and also have the same connotation with the “containment of illegality” in the “Five Principles”. In social governance, in order to make the society harmonious and stable, we must take effective measures, methods and means to effectively control all kinds of extremist ideas. All kinds of extremist ideas must be effectively controlled in accordance with the law. The channels, methods and contents of various extremist ideas must be strictly regulated in accordance with the law. Therefore, the study on modern culture leading the “Five Principles” to adapt to the path of social Rule of Law is to effectively control and combat various extremist thoughts through laws, regulations, policies and other measures, methods and means. Specifically, it includes: scientific analysis and research on various extreme thoughts; effectively controlling all kinds of extremist thoughts through various ways, methods and means; Strict management of all kinds of extremist ideology through laws, regulations, policies and other measures and means; educating and guiding members of society through education, training, publicity and guidance.

5. Resist Infiltration

In the context of globalization, the exchange of ideas, cultures and values has become more frequent, which makes the task of resisting external infiltration more difficult. Resisting infiltration is not only the need to safeguard national sovereignty, security and social stability, but also an important guarantee for maintaining national cultural characteristics and inheritance and development. Therefore, we must take a series of measures to improve the ability to resist infiltration. Firstly, we should strengthen national security education and raise the national security awareness of the whole people. Various channels, such as classroom education, media publicity, community activities, etc., should be adopted to popularize the national security knowledge to enable the general public to understand the importance and urgency of national security, and form a consensus on safeguarding national security. Secondly, laws and regulations should be improved to clarify the principles and requirements for resisting infiltration. Anti-infiltration laws and regulations should be formulated and improved, and the definition of infiltration acts and combat measures should be clarified to provide a legal basis for preventing and combating infiltration acts. At the same time, it is necessary to strengthen the publicity and popularization of laws and regulations to enable the general public to understand the content and requirements of laws and regulations, and raise the awareness of the Rule of Law. Finally, it is necessary to strengthen intelligence collection and analysis to detect and deal with infiltration behavior in a timely manner. It is necessary to establish and improve the information collection and analysis system, use modern scientific and technological means to strengthen the collection and analysis of various information, and improve the accuracy and real time of information. We must take timely measures to stop and crack down on the discovered acts of infiltration and prevent their further spread and harm.

6. Combat Crime

Combating crime is an important part of a society ruled by law and an important means to maintain social order and protect the safety of people's lives and property. Under the guidance of modern culture, we need to constantly explore and optimize the path of the Rule of Law to combat crime. Firstly, we need to perfect laws and regulations to clarify the definition and standards of criminal behavior. Through the clear definition of criminal behavior, the public can better understand the criminal behavior, but also can provide a clear legal basis for law enforcement agencies. In addition, we should also strengthen the legal punishment for criminal behavior, and effectively deter criminal behavior through severe punishment means. Secondly, we need to strengthen law enforcement and improve the efficiency of law enforcement. Strengthening the force of law enforcement, improving the quality and ability of law enforcement personnel can improve the efficiency of law enforcement, and combat criminal acts timely and justly. At the same time, we also need to strengthen supervision on law enforcement to prevent illegal acts in the process of law enforcement. In general, combating crime is an important task for us to maintain social stability and protect people's lives and property. Under the guidance of modern culture, we need to constantly improve laws and regulations, strengthen law enforcement and prevention of criminality, and strengthen international cooperation to jointly combat crimes.

7. Conclusion

Through the in-depth study and analysis of the above content, we can clearly see the importance and necessity of modern culture leading the "Five Principles" to adapt to the path of social Rule of Law. With the core content of protecting the legitimate rights, stopping the illegality, containing the extreme, resisting infiltration and combating crimes, this path aims to build a harmonious, stable and orderly social environment to provide a strong guarantee for the prosperity and development of society. In the future development, we should continue to in-depth study and practice this path, with modern culture as the guide, constantly innovate and improve the Rule of Law system to enable it to better adapt to the needs of social development. At the same time, we also need to strengthen international exchanges and cooperation, learn from the advanced experience of other countries and regions to jointly cope with the challenges brought by globalization. In addition, we should also pay attention to the popularization and deepening of Legal Education, raise the consciousness of Rule of Law in the whole society, and make the Rule of Law a fundamental principle in people's daily lives.
